Surprise.

Washington and Podunk Center finally can agree on something. Neither knows what to make of Sen. Hugo L. Black's appointment to the supreme court.

Sen. Black never had been mentioned publicly as a possibility. Though classified as a red hot new deal, he never had been sold to the country in that capacity.

His qualifications as a supreme court justice will have to be discovered. The fact that President Roosevelt is satisfied with them will not convince some skeptical senators, though as a whole they probably will be able to rationalize their way into confirming the appointment of their comrade.

Sen. Black's sudden and wholly unexpected elevation to prominence is a climax to the supreme court controversy. At last, Mr. Roosevelt has had his chance to put a man of his own choosing on the highest bench. He had reached into the deep south and pulled out not a white rabbit this time, but a black one.

The public awaits developments. Perhaps, as Sen. Borah insisted recently, the whole thing's being done with mirrors and there's no supreme bench vacancy to be filled.

Hobby Show's Fourth Year.

Marion's annual Hobby club show has become an event looked forward to eagerly by people living here and in surrounding communities. It's four years old now, and mighty big for its age. Few similar civic projects here have made equal progress in that length of time.

The 1937 event is scheduled for the week beginning Aug. 23, and arrangements are well under way.

It was not until the first show took place that the public generally became aware that hobbies, consisting largely of collecting a wide variety of curios and relics, had such a large following. Not until then, also, did people unacquainted with such activities fully realize how much enjoyment and benefit can be gained from a hobby. They found the thing is contagious, and as a result the ranks of hobbyists here and in communities nearby have increased on recruits whose interest has been stirred by the annual display.

Now there is reason to believe that no other locality of similar size in Ohio surpasses Marion in the extent of this popular activity. That is beneficial to Marion, for development of hobbies naturally spreads a spirit of enthusiasm, and no community can have too much of that.

The annual occasion is known as Hobby and Homecoming week. The homecoming phase fits in perfectly, for included in the displays shown in store windows and other places throughout the city are numerous articles which have a connection with Marion's history, so that it all has a personal appeal to former residents who make this an occasion for a visit back home.

Included in arrangements for the week is an effort to have people from other communities in this section of the state participate in the show. They are invited to come here during the week and also to enter displays of their own. It is Marion's hope that many will respond to this invitation, for we feel that in the hobby show we have something so good that it should be shared with others.

It Smells.

Political parties must meet expenses. They must depend on contributions. They must stay within certain rules.

Naturally, they are tempted to cross the line. Sometimes they yield. On the whole, though, it's safer to think up some new scheme which no one has tried before.

The Democratic national committee has been full of ideas. One of them was the "victory dinner" at which guests paid as high as $50 for their meal. The profit went to the committee.

Another was the sale of national convention books. This was one of the committee's better ideas, as far as profit was concerned. Books which may have cost $25 to produce were sold for many times that amount. They were sold, however, to corporations. In some instances—a neat way of gilde-stepping the law that corporations must not contribute to political parties. Thousands of dollars were collected.

Yet, the committee chose badly because there is more profit to be concerned. Its convention books, as the story about them is told bit by bit, are making hurtful scandal. Only a little of the story is known so far, but already there is a small storm enough to convey plainly that something that should have been buried wasn't—at least not deeply enough.

President Fulfils Expectations

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright, 1937, by The Marion Star

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—President Roosevelt fulfilled the expectations of his bitterest opponent's and has disappointed a large number of his friends and supporters by nominating to be supreme court justice a man who is neither particularly liberal nor impartial but who satisfies every requirement which the President publicly announced last March when he frankly said he would at the first opportunity "park the court" with men who held his political views on the Constitution.

Mr. Roosevelt could not have made a worse appointment from some standpoints. If he had named John L. Lewis, and, indeed, in some respects, Mr. Lewis would have been a much better appointment, he would know more about the economic operations of America from a practical point of view than does the man chosen by the President, and he is free from any charge of support to the Ku Klux Klan elements.

There will be a fight against the confirmation of Senator Black. It will begin undoubtedly on a broad question of whether the appointment itself is constitutional, but it will ultimately resolve almost every aspect of the recent accusations of political motives made against the President when the bill to enlarge the supreme court was before the Senate.

The Constitution forbids the appointment of any member of the house or senate to any office which has been created during the term served by such member.

No senator or representative shall, during the time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil office under authority of the United States which shall have been created, or the emoluments whereof shall have been increased during such time."

Under the above provision, Mr. Black would not be eligible to such appointment as a justice of the supreme court because the "civil office" to which he has been nominated by President Roosevelt is a position created as a result of an act of congress passed on March 1, 1937. Under that act, special inducements were offered by congress to present members of the supreme court of the United States whereby the "emoluments" of their positions were definitely increased so as to persuade them to retire.

No Previous Assurance
It is well known that previously, no assurance could be given to members of the supreme court that when they retired, they could continue to receive their then existing emoluments.

Congress endeavored to provide the assurance by stating that a justice could "retire" instead of resigning. It will be noted that, in Justice Van Devanter's letter last May, as well as in President Roosevelt's acknowledgment the word "resign" was not used.

Tolks probably will not be deceived for Senator Black because his appointment is a slap in the face against the independent Democrats in the Senate and against all those who opposed the President's supreme court bill. Mr. Roosevelt has refused to bow to the Senate majority and recent defeat on the court controversy and now has revived the same issue in his bitterest form. He has put a political puppet on the bench, a man who made public the contents of private telegrams which came into his possession through the unlawful search by the federal communications commission. The United States circuit court of appeals denounced the unlawful act as a "treason" which a court of equity has power to "enjoin." Such a man's concept of what constitutes equity and fairness under the law and the Constitution of the United States—if Mr. Roosevelt's wishes prevail—now has to be placed alongside those of Brandeis, and Cardozo, and Hughes and Stone.

Senatorial courtesy usually has meant that, when a senator was nominated to an office by the President, he would be confirmed by the Senate as a matter of custom and personal acknowledgement of friendliness for the man who has received the honor. But this rule applies when there is no fundamental issue at stake.

Every once in a while the system breaks down, and listeners get something that tickles them pink.

Like the time at Spilhant when a commentator forgot he was describing the coronation medal review and started off on a rambling disconnected jumble of words the theme of which was "The fleet to all lit up."

But the BBC has done nothing to prevent such things from happening again. The "fall 'em up" announcer received an indefinite term of "kick leave" and will be off the air when he returns to work.

That same punishment was meted out to the chorus man who shouted "Oh, Mrs. Simpson" one night during a musical broadcast. He explained he intended to shout "Oh, Mrs. Gibson," the catch line of a popular comedian. The BBC accepted his explanation, put him on sick leave, returned him to work and forgot all about it.

Other Hours

On the anniversary of the death of King George V, the BBC featured a recording made the year before when the announcer said something to the effect "The King's life is drawing peacefully to its close."

Hundreds of hysterical persons called newspaper offices and the BBC thinking the present king was dead.

The same thing happened on a smaller scale when a dramatic presentation re-enacted the death of William IV in 1837 in a program marking the 100th anniversary of the accession of Queen Victoria.

But Will It Fly?

It is taken for granted in all but a few obtrusive quarters that congress will resurrect the blue eagle in the form of wage and hour legislation.

Opposition has been worn down to a nubbin. Despite fiery criticism of the proposal, particularly from southern enterprise, there seems to be a disposition among congressmen to revert to rubber stamping again.

Almost everything possible has been said for and against the idea, especially against it. There has been, however, strange indifference to what should be the most important consideration of all.

The original blue eagle, a nobly conceived fowl, came up to the requirements of his sponsors in all ways but one. It couldn't fly. A brief review of current history would show even its best friends that their bird was getting the bird long before the supreme court gave it the ax.

Has anyone taken the trouble to figure out how and why a resurrected blue eagle in charge of hours and wages would be able to do any better than the original?

Primarily a project of administration, wage and hour legislation is being discussed as though all the new dealers needed to do was to pass one more law, then everything would be perfect.

Political parties must meet expenses. They must depend on contributions. They must stay within certain rules.

Naturally, they are tempted to cross the line. Sometimes they yield. On the whole, though, it's safer to think up some new scheme which no one has tried before.

never used. Senator Borah of Idaho only last week made a speech in the Senate declaring that no justice could be taken from the supreme court bench by an act of congress and that a justice could leave the bench only by resigning, being impeached, or by death.

This correspondent has held the view that a vacancy has existed ever since Justice Van Devanter withdrew from the bench and that a vacancy does exist now, but that the character of the vacancy is one that has been surrounded with special congressional action and, therefore, the vacancy has been "created" during the present session.

This correspondent has held the view that a vacancy has existed ever since Justice Van Devanter withdrew from the bench and that a vacancy does exist now, but that the character of the vacancy is one that has been surrounded with special congressional action and, therefore, the vacancy has been "created" during the present session.

Inasmuch as Senator Black was reelected in 1932 and his present term does not expire until January, 1938, he comes within the provision of the Constitution which forbids the appointment of any senator, a representative to any civil office "which shall have been created or the emoluments whereof shall have been increased" during the time for which the senator was elected.

It will be argued by Senator Black's supporters that the same objection should have been raised against Senator Robinson. This correspondent, on May 10, in a dispatch to the newspaper, raised such a question, and wrote:

"The Constitution forbids the appointment of any member of the house or senate to any office which has been created during the term served by such member. In the vacancy now created by Mr. Van Devanter's withdrawal, a different kind of vacancy from that which could exist before March 1, 1937 (when the retirement law was passed), and if it is, will it not disqualify Senator Robinson of Arkansas or Wagner of New York or any of the other members of the present congress who receive the appointment in place of Mr. Van Devanter?"

Stop At Some Democrats

But the constitutional question would have yielded an easy remedy if Senator Robinson had been appointed because there would have been put through both houses without disclaimer a clause repealing the act of March 1, 1937, and it is probable that Justice Van Devanter himself would then have gone in a formal letter of resignation and congress would have provided retirement pay in another way, as, indeed, was suggested recently by Senator Borah.

Tolks probably will not be deceived for Senator Black because his appointment is a slap in the face against the independent Democrats in the Senate and against all those who opposed the President's supreme court bill. Mr. Roosevelt has refused to bow to the Senate majority and recent defeat on the court controversy and now has revived the same issue in his bitterest form.

A Book A Day

BY JOHN SELBY

PROBABLY one of the least inviting book titles of the summer is "ISS: And The Crystal Palace." But the volume is one of the summer's most amusing books, and make no mistake about it. Christopher Hobbhouse and his gentle, occasionally malicious, sense of humor have captured and confined in the book the essence of Victorian England, and what certainly is one of the sanest pictures of Prince Albert ever written. This last, as sort of an extra measure.

Albert was not liked, and Albert knew it. He simply could not understand the reticence, addiction to sport and other facets of the English character. He liked being seriously useful, and talking about it, and his English friends seldom talked shop. He liked particularly being president of the Society of Arts, and patron of their exhibitions of "art manufactures."

So that when Henry Cole, strange product of a British record office, stirred up the idea of a great international exhibition the Prince was delighted. It might help break the ice for him, and of course it might also do good for Victoria's Dear People. Plans went forward, a building committee created a dreadful design for the structure which would house the great show, and then a man named Joseph Paxton got wind of things.

Paxton was the Duke of Devonshire's head gardener, man of affairs, director in various railways, building genius. In a week he thought up the Crystal Palace and drew working plans. Almost as quick he reopened the building question and got his idea of a house of glass approved. And out of a glass of more than sextuplet proportions rose the vast Crystal Palace, and from all over the world came the things to fill it. The exhibition was enormously successful, although Mr. Hobbhouse's pictures of the exhibits themselves are frightening.

So to the fire last year. One of history's most fabulous periods is seen from an entirely new angle, and described with humor and yet not unsympathetically.

More than 10,100,000 Tons Carried on River in First Half of This Year.

NATL, Aug. 12—Freight on the Ohio river reached more than 10,100,000 tons last half of 1932 to set a record for a six-month period, river division office of the United States engineers say. The previous record was set in the first six months of 1929 when boats capable of pushing 10,000 tons were in operation, Capt. S. Chandler, supervisor of them, said. They are working at 90 percent of capacity with loads ranging up to 10,000 tons. Heavy shipments of steel, coke and oil made up 80 percent of the increased traffic. Other commodities also increased proportionately. "The increase is just due to a pick-up," said Capt. Chandler. "There is no heavy construction going on which would require shipments any greater than 10,000 tons a month." About 1,300 craft a month pass through the Cincinnati division, setting the new record for river traffic.

Average of nearly 500 barges a month carried most of the traffic while smaller craft were conveyed by an average of 44 packets a month.

GRASS SKIRT NINE FROM HAWAII DEFEATS MARION

Stan Platck, rightfielder of Marion's Ohio State League baseball team, won his spurs as a pitcher last night when he went to the mound against Buck Tally Hawaiian All Stars in an exhibition baseball game that ended with the Geyganites on the short end of a 6 to 4 count.

A crowd estimated at 350 fans witnessed the performance and saw Miss Billy Mitchell photo the Geyganites during the first inning of the game. During her brief stay on the mound, Miss Mitchell struck out Johnny Brich and was flicked for one hit, a single by the non-too-enthusiastic Karl Kauffman.

Platck's pitching performance against the Hawaiian visitors was the high spot of the evening. During the first seven innings, the rightfielder set his opponents down with but one hit, one each in the second and sixth. A two run rally in the eighth, after Marion had been leading 2 to 1 up to that point, gave the Hawaii the victory margin.

BATTLE RAGES OVER SHANGHAI

Shells and Flames Tear City and Nearby Area as Enemy Forces Clash.

By The Associated Press
SHANGHAI, Aug. 14.—(Saturday)—Shelling and flames left this frightened city of 3,500,000 reelingly irretrievably doomed today to the principal role in 1937's bloody chapter of Sino-Japanese tragedy.

Hostilities between Japan's blue-jackets and China's army regulators flared from Shanghai proper all along the 10-mile way to the Woosung fort, where the city's busy Whangpoo river flows into the mighty Yangtze.

On the Whangpoo, warships of the Japanese navy shelled Shanghai's giant municipal wharves—so the Japanese said, to drive from them Chinese soldiers who fired on a Japanese man o' war as the steamed toward Shanghai proper.

The Chinese fought back with canon and machine guns.

The United States had 1,600 marines on day and night patrol of Shanghai's international settlement.

Chinese field pieces and mountain gun smashed at the Japanese positions in the Hongkew area north of the international settlement. Machine gun and rifle fire crackled all day Friday.

Fire roared through buildings in the northern Chinese areas of Chapel and Kiangwan, fanned by a strong wind that threatened another holocaust like that of the Sino-Japanese hostilities of 1932.

Reports that the Japanese were shelling Woosung persisted all night, without exact confirmation. Since Woosung fort is at the Whangpoo-Yangtze confluence, their guns constitute an obstacle to any Japanese effort to rend ships farther up the Yangtze, and traps at Jiduo and other strategic points and attack Chapel and other Chinese areas of Shanghai from the rear.

SLOW DOWN FOR SCHOOLS TO OBEY NEW OHIO LAW

Motorists Must Also Slacken Their Pace to 25 Miles an Hour in Residential Sections of Cities.

By The Associated Press
COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 13.—It's Friday the 13th but all the same it may be a lucky day for city peddlars and school children.

For beginning today motorists are required to slacken their speed when passing school houses where children are entering or leaving and also in the residential sections of municipalities.

A revised speed law along with 14 other new laws passed by the legislature became effective after the 50-day referendum period.

20 Miles Limit
The changes in the speed law call for a maximum of 20 miles an hour when passing a school building or the grounds thereof during recess and while children are going to or leaving school during the opening or closing hours.

Another change reduces the speed limit from 25 miles an hour to 25 miles in residential sections of municipalities except on state routes or main thoroughfares where the 35 maximum rate is retained.

The maximum of 20 miles an hour in the business or closely built up section of a municipality and 45 miles an hour in the open country remains as at present.

Other new laws effective today. Authorize issuance of an "In-transit" license for those engaged in transporting automobiles.

Requires balances in drivers' license funds to be distributed to railway department per diem instead of at end of year.

Patrol Training School
Authorizes the state highway patrol to establish a training school for prospective patrolmen and pay them $30 a month while in training.

Authorizes highway patrol to retain funds derived from the sale of abandoned property coming into its possession.

Requires operators of parking lots and garages to report evidence of crime on machines to the highway patrol.

Creates a non-salaried committee of the members to be appointed by the governor to negotiate compact with other Ohio valley states for stream pollution control.

Gives the state bank superintendent in conjunction with the state banking advisory board power to remove bank officials who persist in continuing bad banking practices after being warned.

Allows state banks authority to issue preferred capital stock thereby placing them on parity with national banks.

Gives the state's blanket consent for the federal government to acquire lands in the state for flood control or soil conservation projects.

Authorizes the governor to restore citizenship to women continuing under the new common law.

U. S. DEMANDS RIGHTS IN PALESTINE SPLIT

Hull Asks For Assurances of Protection in British Revision of Holy Land.

By The Associated Press
WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—The West Ohio Gas Co. of Lima, Ohio, received accelerated construction approval today of a proposed plan of reorganization which it contemplated filing in the federal court at Toledo.

The company, a subsidiary of the trustees of Midland Utilities Co., has been in reorganization since June 23, 1934.

The commission said the plan proposes capitalizing the company with $1,330,000 of 3 per cent first mortgage bonds and $20,000 shares of $10 par value common stock, computed with the present capitalization of $1,330,000 of 6 per cent first mortgage bonds, $65,000 of demand notes, 7,196 shares of 7 per cent cumulative $100 par preferred stock, and 75,000 shares of no par value common stock.

Steaming under forced draught, the U. S. S. Augusta, flagship of the fleet, was expected to arrive here some time tomorrow from its base at Tidewater. Other United States vessels rushed to guard every port in which Americans might be encircled, from China's northern border to south to Canton.

American officials did not know whether all American residents, caught by yesterday's quick concentration of Chinese troops, had been evacuated from the Shanghai hot zone.

Sound of the firing was lost in the international settlement, twice with the fall of a major outbreak.

Both Chinese and Japanese said they were convinced a repetition of the 1932 Shanghai warfare was inevitable.

This time the conflict may be more serious because of a threatened battle in the air. Japanese aircraft carriers are believed to be lying off Shanghai, crammed with planes and ready for action.

A Chinese officer, Lt. Gen. Hsing Chen-chuan, heightened apprehension for the safety of foreigners with the terse observation that if the Japanese used the international settlement as a base for operations the Chinese world would feel free to do likewise.

Most of the expressed opposition was from Republicans—notably Austin, Sen. Bridges of New Hampshire and Sen. Vandenberg of Michigan.

Bridges said he believed Black does not have the "judicial temperament necessary for a supreme court justice." The others did not give their reasons.

The nomination was referred to the committee yesterday after Senators Burke, Democrat of Nebraska, and Johnson, Republican of California, objected to the traditional procedure of confirming a senator at once.

More significant than the outspoken criticism—from the standpoint of votes—was the silence of some of Black's Democratic colleagues, particularly those from the southern senators opposed the nomination as a base for operations in the Chinese world.

Surprise.

Washington and Podunk Center finally can agree on something. Neither knows what to make of Sen. Hugo L. Black's appointment to the supreme court.

Sen. Black never had been mentioned publicly as a possibility. Though classified as a red hot new dealer, he never had been sold to the country in that capacity.

His qualifications as a supreme court justice will have to be discovered. The fact that President Roosevelt is affiliated with them will not convince some skeptical senators, though as a whole they probably will be able to rationalize their way into confirming the appointment of their comrade.

Sen. Black's sudden and wholly unexpected elevation to prominence in a climax to the supreme court controversy. At last, Mr. Roosevelt has had his chance to put a man of his own choosing on the highest bench. He had reached into the deep south and pulled out not a white rabbit this time, but a black one.

The public awaits developments. Perhaps, as Sen. Borah insisted recently, the whole thing's being done with mirrors and there's no supreme bench vacancy to be filled.

President Fulfils Expectations

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Copyright, 1937, by The Marion Star

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Copyright, 1937, by The Marion Star

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—President

Roosevelt has fulfilled the expectations of his bitterest opponents and has disappointed a large number of his friends and supporters by nominating to be supreme court justice man who is neither judicially-minded nor impartial but who is astute, resourceful, which the President publicly announced last March when he stated, and he would at the first opportunity "pack the court" with men who held his political views on the Constitution.

Mr. Roosevelt could not have made a worse appointment from some standpoints. If he had named John L. Lewis, and, indeed, in some respects, Mr. Lewis would have been a much better appointment because he knows more about the economic operations of America from a practical standpoint than does the man chosen by the President, and he is free from any charge of support to Ku Klux Klan elements.

There will be a fight against the confirmation of Senator Black. It will begin undoubtedly on a broad question of whether the appointment itself is constitutional, but it will ultimately resolve almost every aspect of the recent appropriations of political muscle made over at the President when the bill to enlarge the supreme court was before the Senate.

The original dispute rests on this clause of the Constitution, which says:

"No senator or representative shall, during the time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil office under authority of the United States which shall have been created before the time for which he was elected, or the emoluments whereof shall have been increased during such time."

Under the above provision, Mr. Black would not be eligible to accept appointment as associate justice of the supreme court because the "civil office" to which he has been nominated by President Roosevelt is a position created as a result of an act of congress passed on March 1, 1937. Under that act a special indulgence was offered to Congress to permit members of the supreme court of the United States whereby the "endoments" of their positions were definitely increased so as to permit them to retire.

No Previous Assurance.

It is well known that previously, no assurance could be given to members of the supreme court that, when they retired, they could continue to receive their then existing salaries.

Congress endeavored to provide the assurance by trusting that a justice could "retire" instead of resigning. It will be noted that, in Justice Van Devanter's letter last May, as well as in President Roosevelt's acknowledgement, the word "resign" was

Radio in England

BY RUDER WENGER

Associated Press Writer

LONDON, Aug. 13.—The British Broadcasting Corporation, held up as a model of radio reform to the rest of the world in having trouble reforming itself.

Formed frankly to get away from what the British government believed were evils of the other, the BBC has been trying ever since to give the people what they ought to have.

Every once in a while the system breaks down, and listeners get something that tickles them pink.

Like the time at Spitalfields when a commentator forgot he was describing the coronation royal review and started off on a rambling disconnected jumble of words the title of which was "The Fleet is to all the world."

But the BBC has done nothing to prevent such things from happening again. The "all lit up" announcer received an indefinite term of "sick leave" and will be off the air when he returns to work.

That same punishment was meted out to the chorus man who shouted "Oh, Mrs. Simpson" one night during a musical broadcast. He explained he intended to shout "Oh, Mrs. Gibson," the catch line of a popular comedian. The BBC accepted his explanation, put him on sick leave, returned him to work and forgot all about it.

Other Bombs.

On the anniversary of the death of King George V, the BBC featured a recording made the year before when the announcer said something to the effect "The King's life is drawing peacefully to its close."

Hundreds of hysterical persons called newspaper offices and the BBC thinking the present king was dead.

The same thing happened on a smaller scale when a dramatic presentation re-enacted the death of William IV in 1837 in a program marking the 100th anniversary of the accession of Queen Victoria.

But Will It Fly?

It is taken for granted in all but a few obstinate quarters that congress will resurrect the blue eagle in the form of wage and hour legislation.

Opposition has been worn down to a nubbin. Despite fiery criticism of the proposal, particularly from southern enterprise, there seems to be a disposition among congressmen to revert to rubber stamping again.

Almost everything possible has been said for and against the idea, especially against it. There has been, however, strange indifference to what should be the most important consideration of all.

The original blue eagle, a nobly conceived fowl, came up to the requirements of his sponsors in all ways but one. It couldn't fly. A brief review of current history would show even its best friends that their bird was getting the bird long before the supreme court gave it the ax.

Has anyone taken the trouble to figure out how and why a resurrected blue eagle in charge of hours and wages would be able to do any better than the original? Primarily, a project of administration, wage and hour legislation is being discussed as though all the new dealers needed to do was to pass one more law, then everything would be perfect.

The New Political Philosophy

BY DOROTHY THOMPSON

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—The critic who is skeptical of, or in opposition to, many of the tendencies and measures of this third new deal is called upon to explain himself if he would avoid being allied with idealistic attitudes which are by no means his own. He may find himself appalled at the company which welcomes him and embarrassed by his admirers.

Because he has been opposed to making the supreme court a jury of yeomen for the executive or of congress he will have attributed to him all the ideas of Mr. Justice Sutherland because he doubts the premises on which the Black-Connery wages and hour bill is based, he will be called a champion of ruthlessness and unregulated sweating of labor, and an opponent of all social and economic reform.

If he believes that public and legal protection of trade unions implies legal responsibility on the part of trade unions for fair practices, he will be hailed as a spokesman for Mr. Tom Girdler and the dominant sociology of Wall Street.

Nor can he honestly say that he does not care, or blame the dumbness of the public, or retreat into a fortress of intellectual arrogance. For the function of the writer is to make himself understood, and the extent to which he is misunderstood is the extent of his failure. If he writes opinion on public affairs, plainly he writes to influence the course of those affairs. Otherwise he would commit his opinions to a diary.

But his difficulties are great. It is symptomatic of the strains of the society in which we live that things are increasingly represented in Black versus White; that differentiation of opinion even on so empirical a thing as method is suspected of being treason to progress or—on the other hand—an assault upon organized society. I cannot recall a time, except during the war, when debate was more contentious, acrimonious, or intolerant. The symptom is fairly universal. In all those counties where personal and individual opinion still can find expression, but it is particularly glaring in the United States. It testifies to something which seems to me quite as great a cause for concern as other, more patent and obvious rule-of-thumb not to be confused with realism. It dominates much of our university life and unconsciously influences prevailing attitudes. It has found almost perfect expression in the new deal, as thrilling as the midnight ride of the nightingale.

Night Will Be Filled With Music At Legion Powwow

By The Associated Press
MUSKOGEE, Okla., Aug. 12—Funds for veterans of the World War, for cases of home and three days beginning with the annual state convention of the American Legion.

of treasured days will be of treasured days and comical instances will be big parade on Aug. 12. Bands blare out those of "Over There" and "The Long Way To Berlin" and new officers and vote on a bunch of resolutions.

It will be time for fun, but business must not be forgotten. State Commander Sam Clegg told the veterans today was putting the finishing touches on elaborate plans for the meeting and generators said they anticipated a record crowd.

Playing with the Legion in its annual convention will be the 40th and the 8 and 10th Sons of the Legion.

Parade sessions will be held Monday and Tuesday, with the election of officers the last item.

Delegates were in the Cobb's position. Trey Jensen of Springfield, V. C. Suh of Cleveland and Frank Roberts of Youngstown, Ohio, host to the 100th convention, making a determined effort to outdo last year's meeting while Frank Sandusky already has arrangements to entertain the 101st.

The 100th convention unofficially opened Saturday night with the "red carpet" dinner, which was followed by the 40th and 8th Sons.

Major Cobb warned veterans no "rough stuff" would be served. He said strict precautions would be taken to guard against throwing of water out of windows—a practice that has been other conventions.

He asserted that 100 Legionnaires known as the "red carpet" dinner and Columbus police in charge of order.

Music competitions will be held in Legion units. Sixteen men and cash awards totaling $1,000 go to the winners. The largest reward will go to the group of the drum and bugle competition Sunday after-

Pint Size Geniuses

By The Associated Press Feature Service
"Brightest youngster you ever saw," proclaim proud papa, telling what Johnny did or didn't do. "The kid's a genius!" And he may be right. For here are three children who took intelligence tests recently and scored ratings higher than "genius." All girls, too. We don't know anything about the boy L. C. But if at 7 he can go trudging 'round the country, he must have something on the ball. The rating for "genius," by the way, varies with the age of the child.

AMONG the notables scheduled to attend the convention is Sgt. Samuel Woods of Fort Thomas, Ky., described by Gen. John J. Pershing as the outstanding hero of the World war.

A thing as disinterested and objective thinking. The psychologists and neo-Marxians have seen to that. They have told us that the operations of our minds are purely rationalizations of our basic economic prejudices and social and psychological conditioning, so that we have no objective or valid tests of anything. We are merely leaves tossed on the stream of inevitable social forces, and that wisdom therefore consists merely in being a good guesser and drifting with the stream of history. If this be true the social critic has no function.

This column, some may have guessed, does not share this conception of man and his mind. On the contrary, it still believes that reason and realism are the only possible solvents for the social struggle. With limited intellectual equipment, and despite inevitable prejudices, we shall continue to try to enlarge the one and overcome the other, and to ask of every measure, first, what is its real objective, and second, is it likely to achieve this objective. And this we shall do in full consciousness that the process will sometimes find us on one side of the political fence and sometimes on the other.

THE NEW POLITICAL PHILOSOPHY IN U. S.

word radical has passed out of American speech, along with the type of mind it represented. Our radicals are all their's and progressives, though what sort of a mental animal a Marquis liberal may be I do not comprehend, although I see them all about my office. Policies are characterized by perfectly extraneous epithets. I cannot see to save my life what the question of balancing or unbalancing the budget has to do with liberalism or conservatism. It is a technical question to me, judged by rational and realistic tests of probable social results.

Presumably everybody wants to live in a solvent, stable and expanding economy, and a dignified, safe and creative society, doing good work for fair remuneration. And most people want to avoid a catastrophic revolution. Whatever measures can secure us these will be the right measures, and the business of the social critic is to judge with whatever capacities he possesses whether or not measures proposed are taking us in that direction. He may prove to have been right or wrong, but certainly the humanitarian impulse of the author of legislation will not be his criterion.

But I am aware that fewer and fewer people believe there is such one real deal and in place of a really imaginative and scientific program aimed at mitigating business cycles, heading off and defeating unemployment, and providing for an expanding economy by means of long-range rational policy and largely automatic government controls, we have a crowd of idealistic internes, earnestly diagnosing pimplies and writing up elaborate prescriptions for them.

Old Word Gone

We do not even have a vocabulary of words which convey semi-precise meanings. The good old from a plea for U. S. entry into the League of Nations delivered when Lewis was in his oratorical prime at the end of the World war:

"We can salute the regenerate earth in the new spirit which our children reincarnate it with their sacred bodies still sanctifying the soul that is their distant grave."

Indiana's Senator Benjamin Harrison, 23rd President of the United States and a prominent member of the Senate, was famed for facility of expression. Upon the death of a fellow Hoosier, he said: "He had ample time to arrange the draperies of his spirit before entering the presence of the Great King."

behalf of the people in all other states of the union. It is not a personal question.

Personally, Mr. Black is a likeable man. He is pleasant and affable. He has not been nationally known as an outstanding lawyer; his experience at the bar being rather local in character. He has been nationally known, however, for the decided partisan views that he has held on questions of public policy.

He is a master of innuendo and is one of the most impulsive speakers on the Democratic side—hardly the type that any other President of the United States would ever have considered war temperamentally suited to carry out the spirit of the oath of office of a supreme court justice, which is to administer justice to rich and poor alike, impartially and fairly. It will be held that, if Mr. Black's nomination fails of action at this session, he will be given a recess appointment, but his recess appointment would be equally invalid, for he could not accept a civil office created while he was serving in the Senate no matter when the appointment came to him.

Mr. Roosevelt had a number of liberal judges of the Round Table from whom to choose men with experience on circuit courts of appeals, but he chose to do what his defenders have been saying he would never do—use his great office to satisfy a political grudge and to carry the battle of political demagoguery into the very precincts of the supreme court itself.

—Mr. Roosevelt

Who Killed Cock
Robin No Mystery
At Dumontville

By United Press

NEW LEXINGTON—America's No. 1 robin killer is D. L. Swartz, of nearby Dumontville, who has the only federal and state permits ever issued to shoot the birds.

Swartz secured his permits in order to be able to protect his raspberry patch of 3,000 trees. "I tried artificial snakes and fake crows, dummy crows and hawks, but they didn't bother the robins. The birds even chirped on these dummies and knew I was a bluffer," Swartz said.

"I had every cent I could borrow on the farm, and when the robins came by the thousands I decided it was either the robins or my family going hungry."

Game Warden Charles Hiltner told him he would be arrested if he killed round off his own land.

So Swartz obtained ice permits, both No. 1.

He refuses to say how many robins he has killed, but admits that as far as the berries are concerned, the effect has been effective.

To rid the berries of rats and voles, he has used a number of dry, explosive devices which produce gas harmless to human beings if properly handled.

FLAME TRAIL

BY MARIE DE NERVOIS

LAST SAT. MAR. 24 NERVOIS

CHAPTER 51

RESCUE IN SMOKING MARION groped her way to the door, and as she opened it, a thick wave of smoke seemed to roll in on top of her.

SLOWLY they both ran out into the clearing, but here it was even dark. Through the darkness they could see the flashes of flame through the trees to the east, ominous crackles and cracklings filled the air, and the heat was suffocating.

"Father! Kay cried in an agonized voice. 'I've got to get him!'"

He started to run toward the center of the clearing, but Marion grabbed her arm.

"Don't be crazy! Hell have been more long ago! The west was the precipitous west

she then drew back with a cry

as she caught sight of a tree that suddenly burst into flame, a gigantic torch. A second later, there was an answer of fire from down the western slope.

Shrieking the name to get the two girls ran to the edge of the sharp precipice that lay away from a rocky ledge, and into the blackness.

"Marion!" They could make out

Ted's voice clearly now, and the girls clung to the cliff, which was now lighted by a second tree that had caught.

"Follow me!" Ted's voice rang out with the harshness of a military command.

Swinging around a projecting rock, he led the perious way down, the two girls silently and breathlessly following in his exact footsteps. One last drop, and they had reached the timbered slope.

Ted grabbed one of their hands in each of his and raced down with them to the foot of the canyon. Without a word, he helped them across the narrow stream in his depths, and they pushed up the other side.

Not until they were well up on the other ridge did he pause. Then with a broken "Thank God!" he pulled Kay into his arms.

"Ted! Ted! Where is Dad?" Marion demanded impudently, and Kay pulled away with a gasp, ashamed of the overwhelming emotion that had made her forget everything but her own relief and happiness.

"Marion! Forgive me!" Ted swung around, still keeping one hand on Kay as though fearing that she might vanish, but putting a steady touch on Marion's arm. "Seeking Kay here put everything else out of my head. Your father, Marion—" he paused helplessly searching for words to break the news.

"I know it!" Marion gave a pitiful groan, and put her hand to her eyes. "You don't have to tell me he's dead."

In an instant, Kay's arms were around her, and she turned inquiringly to Ted. He nodded.

"Yes, Marion. Mercifully dead! That is the only way you can think of it."

In as few and as gentle words as possible, Ted told Marion of his finding of his father. Then, to give her time to get a grip on herself, after the first shock of sorrow, he went on to describe his meeting with Josh Hastings and the subsequent events.

It was Kay's turn to shudder at the thought of the narrow escape Ted had had. But she did not waste any time on the past, as her mind flew to the immediate future.

"Where did you leave him?" she demanded. "We must get right back! He might die or escape or something."

"He had a mean blow on the head, but I don't think he'll die," Ted answered. "And there's no chance of his escaping. He's well out of the fire line, with this shift of wind, but I doubt if he knows it. By the time we get back, I reckon he'll be ready to tell anything he knows, rather than risk being left behind."

"Come!" Marion turned and led the way up the slope. "Ted's future is the thing to think of now! Not my poor Dad. His troubles are over, and you're right—it is for better." Her voice broke with a sob, but she pushed bravely on, with Ted and Kay on either side of her. "How did Josh Hastings ever happen to be there?" she asked finally, with a determined change of subject.

"Search me!" Ted began, but Kay interrupted.

"He must have been looking for Zeke Farley and his posse," she exclaimed. "Shorty said he'd gone out to join them."

"I reckon Zeke Farley's given up looking for me right now, and has joined the fire fighting gang," Ted observed. "Josh Hastings likely came to the same conclusion, and was on his way to find him."

He stopped as the slope became steeper, and saved his breath for the climb, leading the way as they fell into single file up the rocky ledge. The sky behind them was weirdly lighted with a lurid glow which permeated the darkness, spreading out in a pinkish glow over their heads.

"I Want the Truth!"

After some desperately difficult scrambling, Ted paused to take his bearings.

"It must have been about here that I left that cayuse of mine. Wait a second!" He left them, and reappeared a few minutes later, leading his horse. "Now you can have easier going."

Motoring the two girls to get on, he led the way south along the crest of the ridge. After a half hour or so, he stopped and gave a long "Whoopie!"

There was a faint answer in the distance.

"He's there all right," Ted declared with relief in spite of his former confident assertion that Josh Hastings couldn't escape them.

Another 10 minutes, and they came out on the ridge where Ted had left his would-be assassin. A string of oaths and imprecations greeted them as they picked their way through the underbrush, but Ted cut him preemtarily short.

"I've brought my witness," he announced curtly, and the next minute they all came out on Josh Hastings, who peered up at the two girls with incredulous amazement.

"Where in hell?"

"Never mind that," Ted interrupted sharply. He pulled a notebook and pencil out of his pocket.

"Now, then! Repeat what you said back there!"

Josh Hastings' mouth twisted. "I don't know what you mean."

"Oh, yes, you do!" Ted's eyes narrowed. "And unless you come across, I'll leave you here for the cremation you missed before."

From his place on the ground bound hand and foot, Hastings struggled up to a sitting position. "So, you still want me to lie, to save your neck, and put my own in the noose!" he sneered, with the effect of his words. "I'd rather take a chance on the fire!"

"I don't want any lies," Ted countered. "I want the truth about how you killed Scrap Johnson, and framed me for it. And I'm going to get it!" He made a move toward his gun.

Josh Hastings gave a harsh laugh. "Go ahead and get it, then! And I'll have witnesses to prove you got it by exportation!"

Josh Hastings, refusing to confess, uttered a strangled, convulsive

Wife From Dicky in Canada
Leave Years in Cabin.

LILLIAN DID not wait for an answer to her indignant query but went on into our tiny camp kitchen, emerging from it three minutes later with a glass of hot milk into which I knew she had dissolved the sedative she wished me to take. As she held it out to me, she put her query again in slightly different form.

"Well, how about it?" she asked earnestly. "Are you going to drink this, or do you still think I mean to do you in so you won't be able to get on the job if Dicky needs you?"

"I'm going to drink it, of course," I told her, and, indeed, my head was aching as intensely as before from the pain. But it was fully half an hour since the draught before the pain lessened, and I drifted off into slumber, conscious that Lillian, who had drawn a couch opposite to me, was watching me and would not go to sleep herself until she had seen me well under the influence of the sedative.

It was broad daylight, with the morning sun streaming through the windows, when I was conscious of Lillian's hand upon my wrist in a compelling pressure. She was smiling cheerfully at me and behind her stood her husband with a broad grin upon his face.

Wife From Dicky

"Everything's all right," she said quickly. "We've had a wire from the Dicky-bird, and you'll never guess where he has pitched."

"What's going on wrong with the race?" I asked.

"Not unless Bob's worn out the race," he retorted. "This telegram which I've copied out of you, was sent down the road in Quebec where we were staying when we left for this camp."

"What Message Said?"

He stepped to the side of the couch, held the telegram out to me, and read aloud the message which it held, which he had fitted so adroitly to his own signature.

"Have followed fox to his native lair. Returning tonight. But off fishing trip until following day. No cause whatever for worry. Everything okay, Love, Dicky."

"Isn't that just like the Dicky-bird?" Lillian queried. "He hasn't changed a bit since his teens. I still have hopes of you, Madge, when you married him, but he's just as lovably irresponsible as he ever was. But, at any rate, he's safe, and we don't have to worry any more about anything."

"Not even about the Canadian menage coming back?" her young daughter queried excitedly from the adjoining bedroom.

he had a home somewhere in the White mountains.

"He says in his wire: 'Have been trailing Nevin. Completely forgot appointment with him for yesterday. Thought I could reach him home by the time he woke up.'"

"That's a good touch," Lillian interposed. "Nevin always works from midnight to daylight."

"Yes, I know," Harry assented, "but Dicky goes on to say: 'Found that he'd gone for a couple of days' fishing in Canada.'

HUMAN METERS PARKING BOON

Can Prevent Overtime Parking and Relieve Akron of Some of Its Relief Load.

By United Press
AKRON, O.—Nayor Lee D. Schroy thinks the human parking meter will ease city officials of their two greatest headaches—overtime parking and an empty relief treasury.

What is the human parking meter?

It is a plan requiring motorists to pay five cents for use of parking space for an hour. Should the motorist park overnight the human parking meter—a man on the city relief rolls—would inform police of the infraction.

Then down would drop the police tow truck and away would go the parking meter's automobile. A little persistence in such matters would teach the parking hog his lesson, officials feel.

That would cure the overtime parking headache.

In the second place, men on the city relief rolls would do the watching. Relief Director Jacob Zang guesses there are about 6,000 men fit to do this light work.

The arithmetic of it is simple.

Each space should produce, at least five cents an hour, and very likely more, as there might be two, three or more cars parked in a single space in the course of an hour.

If each human parking meter had five spaces he would take in 25 cents an hour or, for the 30 hours from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m.—$2.50.

Working two days a week, he would receive—and keep for himself—$5 a week, which is above the present average relief allowance. The $5 is a conservative figure. There are approximately 1,000 legal parking spaces in the downtown area. The spaces, on this basis, would keep 200 human parking meters a day. Or, on a two-day basis, 600 of them a week. The city would still have the remaining relief cases to handle but, with 600 provided for, a large share of the burden would be lifted.

Zang pointed out the plan might run into some difficulties.

He said with the human parking meter keeping all they take in, relief officials would have to take their word for the extent of their resources.

At the estimated $5 a week it is conservative and the watches could be rotated to prevent anyone from monopolizing the most lucrative section. Mayor Schroy, who thought of the plan has handed it over to the law department for study.

They Advocate Indictment of Those Who Can Work and Won't.

By United Press

ATLANTA, Ga.—Two Georgia judges believe that any idle person who is physically able to work can get work and has no viable means of support even though he is "on relief" should be charged with vagrancy.

Superior Judge W. M. Harper told the Bumpkin County grand jury at Americus that idleness is a crime against society, "and those who voluntarily remain idle impose upon and are a menace to society."

"It may be safely asserted that in this section at this time there is very little real need for relief," the 60-year-old Justice told the jury. "There are large numbers in idleness who should be called back to work."

The agricultural industry finds itself in a precarious situation because of extensive shortage of labor, and yet it is true that large numbers who are eligible for such work are practically idle."

"It would seem that the relief measures that were adopted by the Federal government some four years ago have given rise to some unwholesome conditions...."

"It is not the man who seeks relief instead of employment, nor the who sits idly by and awaits the old age pension. Nor is it he who trots upon honest toll and insists upon relief until employment of his choosing may be pressed upon him who will contribute to the upbuilding of social security."

In Atlanta, Judge Paul S. Etheridge, commenting upon Judge Harper's charge in which he urged the jury to indict those who refused to leave relief rolls, said: "While I do not know the facts regarding the relief situation in Fulton county, if there are out-of-the-tolls persons who are able to work, and yet are content to remain on relief rolls, I do know such a situation should be cleaned up by a grand jury."

THREE ON A MATCH

Fighting three cigarettes on one match is fun for the 13 members of the Anti-Superstition society, which meets every Friday 13th.

BY ACHILLES KINSEY

Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO, Aug. 13.—On every Friday the thirteenth 13 prominent business and professional men sit at a luncheon table in Room 1313 of a Chicago hotel for the sole purpose of blasting superstition.

They are members of the original Anti-Superstition society. They don't believe in luck, fate, charms or other such hogwash and some of the things they do to prove it would blow the superstitions into everlasting jitters.

They take black cats to the luncheon, enter the room by walking beneath a stepladder, open umbrellas at the table, throw each about without tossing, ring it over their shoulders, cross knives and forks, light three cigarettes off one match, break mirrors with great glee and brag without knowing on wood.

Charter members of the Chicago group include the flying Col. Beauchamp, who acts as custodian of charms which Carroll H. Sudler Jr., real estate broker, may find hidden on members. The founders are "defended" by Dwight
